

HOMEWORK FOR LIFE!

A MEANINGFUL & MOTIVATING APPROACH

A Seminar for Teachers K - 6 Presented by DR IAN LILICO

Every State and Territory is currently reviewing Homework as a result of research indicating changes in the way that young people learn, socialize and interact as well as research into the changing world of work, family and the major impacts of modern technology.

During this seminar Dr Lillico will explore:

- issues around the relevance, quantity and quality of homework in primary schools
- strategies to ensure homework is relevant, meaningful and engaging for students, teachers and parents

Ian will outline the theory behind his Homework Grid concept that looks at the inclusion of more active items including:

physical activity	shopping	helping at home	stress management
outdoor activity	creative arts	design & innovation	cultural pursuits
personal interest projects	being read to	playing games	teaching parents

Participants will be asked to share how they have embraced new approaches to homework in their school and the challenges they faced.

The seminar will include an opportunity for participants to plan for the introduction of the homework grid concept in their schools assisted by Ian and fellow participants.

The day will conclude with a question and answer session on implementation and general concerns.
